Real Art

The concept of Cubism is that the artwork is supposed to capture life from different angles and perspectives. At first, when I was trying to work with Adobe Firefly, it struggled to really get this concept straight and make images show real complexity. However, by upgrading the AI model this issue disappeared. It was able to really shine through different angles and perspectives with the eyes giving a paradoxical feeling as the whole concept of cubism is the truthfulness of representation under someone's gaze. It was surprising to see the incredible shading work and the use of color. However, it failed to incorporate more range of perspectives and make it more interesting by adding more details and objects.
